(Full marks: 100)

Answer ALL questions. (100 marks)

Answer all questions in this section.

Question 1

A group of parents at the Family Service Centre (FSC) you are attached to express their distress about caring for their two to four years old children. The two-year-olds often display 'rebellious' behaviours, while the four-year-olds talk non-stop. Your supervisor asked you to prepare a psychoeducation session with these parents to help them manage their children better.

Based on this context, answer the following questions.

Question 1a

Analyse and discuss the biopsychosocial needs of the two- and four-year-olds. You should refer to Erikson's and Piaget's theories to psychoeducate the parents.

(20 marks)

Question 1b

Appraise emotional development in early childhood. Describe 'emotion-coaching' and 'emotion-dismissing' and examine the consequences of 'emotion-coaching' and 'emotion-dismissing' on emotion regulation in young children. Provide research and examples to illustrate your points.

(15 marks)

Question 1c

Taking into consideration the dual-focus multidimensional framework, discuss and formulate an intervention plan for helping the parents to manage their two to four years old children. Support your intervention with sound theoretical foundation.

(20 marks)

Question 2

Evaluate and discuss how James Marcia's Identity Status Theory can help you as a social worker to guide adolescents toward healthy identity development. Provide an example to illustrate your point.

(20 marks)

Question 3

Evaluate cognitive development in late adulthood. With appropriate local examples, propose how the Selective Optimisation Compensation (SOC) theory can contribute to successful aging.

(25 marks)
